Liberty League to Arouse Propertied Men on New Deal

Ask If Government Is "Robbing Peter to Pay Paul"

TO BE NONPARTISAN

Noted Democrats and Republicans Alike Join Critical Group

WASHINGTON—(AP)—The American Liberty League began laying the foundation Thursday for a campaign across the continent to recruit 3 to 4 million property owners to judge the New Deal.

Avowedly non-partisan and not anti-Roosevelt, it has set out to command all possible influence in warning up the debate over the question whether the administration is "robbing Peter to pay Paul."

Noted Leaders
WASHINGTON—(AP)—The New Deal is about to be put under a powerful, bi-partisan scrutiny by an organization announced as "The American Liberty League."

Among the founders are two former presidential nominees, Alfred E. Smith and John W. Davis; the former Republican senator and now representative from New York; James W. Wadsworth, the former Republican governor of New York; Nathan L. Miller, and Irene du Pont, who contributed to the Smith and Roosevelt campaign funds.

President Roosevelt was informed of the plan a week ago. It is assumed he is sympathetic with the announced purpose of combating "radicalism" and informing public opinion of the issues of the times.

The president of the league will be Rudolph S. White, former chairman of the Democratic National Executive Committee and later president of the Association Against the Prohibition Amendment. He announced formation of the new corporation, telling of plans eventually to have it embrace the entire country.

Asked whether it was to take part in political campaigns, he said "not at this time." Beyond that he would not go.

Purposes of the league he declared formally as follows:

"It is a non-partisan organization formed, as stated in the charter, to defend and uphold the Constitution of the United States, and to gather and disseminate information that (1) will teach the necessity of respect for the rights of persons and property as fundamental to every successful form of government, and (2) will teach the duty of government to encourage and protect individual and group initiative and enterprise, to foster the right to work, earn, save and acquire property, and to preserve the ownership and lawful use of property when acquired."

Asked if the league was anti-New Deal, Shouse replied that it evidently is not anti-Roosevelt.

It was noted that the Democrats who have agreed to serve on the Executive Committee were identified on the stop-Roosevelt movement at the Chicago convention in 1932, but Mr. Shouse said this had no significance.

He spoke of radicalism being apparent in some sections of the country, and added:

"Let us assume that there should be means to check tendencies to extreme radicalism. The president is doubtless as anxious to check as anyone else."

2 Officers to Die for Cuban Revolt

Uprising Crushed and Its Chief Leaders Are Court-Martialed

HAVANA, Cuba. (AP)—Two high-ranking Cuban army officers were sentenced to death by a court-martial Thursday for participation in a revolutionary plot against Colonel Federico Batista, commander in chief of the army.

Major Angel Chelvarria and Captain Angel Echeverria, commander of the Army Signal Corps, were convicted of participation in the plot during an early morning trial.

The revolt, planned for September 4, was crushed before it could start.

You know the rest of the story. These motorists were pointed through Arkansas to Texas. They didn't know—or they had forgotten—that here in Arkansas we spend $20,000 a mile for concrete highways in order to be able to drive 50 miles an hour, and then we turn livestock loose on those highways to make driving 50 miles an hour plain suicide.

Loans to Restore Farm Price Parity

Government Holding Program Aims at 15-Cent Cotton

WASHINGTON. (AP)—A broader use of federal loans to assure farmers that eventually they will get as much for their crops as they did on the 1909-1914 average was predicted Wednesday by Farm Administration officials.

By obtaining government loans, they said, farmers could keep crops off the market until prices were high enough. These same officials considered part of the federal strategy, the just-announced loans of 12 cents a pound on cotton and extension until January 1 of present 45-cents a bushel corn loans.

The parity price—1909-1914 average—of cotton is 15 cents, and the market now is around 13. Corn parity is 74 cents a bushel with the market now about 60.

Both the cotton and corn loan rates now are below parity, but it was indicated they would be equalized gradually as supply and market conditions justified. Officials remarked that last year's 10-cent cotton loans had been increased to 12 cents this year, indicating what might be expected to follow.

To support loan rates, meanwhile, the administration expects to continue strict control over production to prevent accumulation of surpluses which would beat down prices. Officials say it would not be necessary to make loans on all crops since the less important farm commodities normally pay "follow the leader."

BROOKLYN, N. Y.—(AP)—A call went out for detective volunteers Thursday to work day and night until the $427,000 armored truck holdup of Tuesday has been solved and the robbers captured. A submarine gun test at the scene of the robbery is being traced. Meanwhile the search for the robbers spread in ever-widening circles.

WASHINGTON. (AP)—The Farm Credit Administration Thursday designated the following additional emergency drought counties in Arkansas: Baxter, Crawford, Independence, Madison, Newton, Stone and Washington.

Strike Set for September 1—Johnson-Richberg Split Denied

Uncle Sam generously spread the recovery salve over the nation's strike-pocked labor situation Thursday and prepared a further application. The reactions were varied.

The NRA Labor Board agreed to insist on reopening the manufacturers' code.

The American Federation of Labor seeks wage and hour revisions in the motor car factories.

Hopes for a speedy settlement of the aluminum strike appeared more remote Thursday. While labor leaders placed the burden for rejecting the government's latest peace plan on their shoulders, company officials reaffirmed their earlier decision to keep six plants closed.

Francis J. Gorman, chairman of the special strike committee designated to direct the general strike in the textile industry, reiterated Thursday that instructions to call a walkout by September 1 would be followed to the letter.

Capone Removed to Island Prison

No. 1 Prisoner Placed on Alcatraz Island, San Francisco

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal.—(AP)—"Scarface" Al Capone, former Chicago gang lord, and 42 other convicts were imprisoned amid the utmost secrecy on Alcatraz Island in San Francisco today.

Announcement that Capone was in the gang came from Director Sanford Bates of the Federal Prison Bureau at Washington shortly after the special train bearing the prisoners from the Atlanta penitentiary arrived here.

The train was shunted several times as it neared its destination to prevent any possible attempt to escape and to avoid crowds which gathered at trains along the route.

Warden James A. Johnston, who several days ago told Attorney General Homer S. Cummings that "Alcatraz is ready," superintended transfer of the desperadoes from the mainland to the fortress-like island prison.

A group of heavily armed federal men and guards from the new prison, located on Alcatraz, a town north of the island, as the train switched. The cars were then switched to a large barge and a launch towed it to the island dock. Expectations were warned by the guards not to approach too closely.

The prisoners were brought here in the government's plan to segregate the more desperate characters. Atlanta prison officials also had reported an escape plot was brewing in the prison there and the convicts were removed Sunday night, four days ahead of schedule.

Secretary Roper Declares Private Enterprise Is Recovering

WASHINGTON. (AP)—Secretary Roper assured the nation's business men Wednesday night that the "government and the masses of the people themselves recent unthinking statements of subtle suggestions that the profit motive in American life has been or is to be abolished."

The secretary's statement obviously was considered by the administration as highly significant. It was timed to coincide with presidential reorganization of the NRA on a permanent basis.

With his declaration that the New Deal is not trying to override the private profit motive, Roper coupled another that business is definitely on the upgrade. Private enterprise, he said, is

Farmers Urged to Plant Fall Grain

Save Roughage, as Additional Drought Emergency Measure

Two prime drought relief measures which are in the hands of the farmers themselves and which should have prompt and continued attention, are the conservation of all possible food and feed crops, and the planting of fall grain crops to meet winter and spring needs, declares T. Roy Reid, assistant extension director, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

There is much low grade roughage on farms in the state which ordinarily would not be considered worth harvesting, but which will, when better roughage is not available, be very useful in maintaining livestock on the farm. The corn in many areas of the state can be cut and shocked and a great deal of rough feed saved in this way. Coarse grasses may be cut and saved. In some areas there is much Johnson grass along road sides, ditches and railroad right of ways, and other places which would add considerably to the hay supply if cut. It may be considerable trouble to save some of this roughage, but if not saved, there may be a great need.

The rains have made planting of fall crops possible in some areas. Turnips can be planted over a period of several weeks and will furnish an abundance of both food for families and feed for livestock if the fall season is favorable. Large plantings of turnips are advised.

The small grain crops, if planted early may furnish much winter grazing. There seems to be an opportunity for much larger than usual plantings of oats, wheat, rye and barley for winter pasture, and of oats and wheat for a grain supply next spring.

There is much that can be done in taking vegetation off land and getting it ready for planting when rains do come in areas where the drought has not yet been broken. The fall and winter of 1930 was most favorable for the fall plantings made that year and these crops met many food and feed needs of the winter. A heavy fall crop of hay was also made in 1930 and fine pasturage grew in September and October which enabled cattle to carry the winter months in good flesh. It is hoped that rains may make a similar condition possible this year, Mr. Reid said.

The man in charge of this is President Roosevelt himself, making the chief decisions and allocating the $225,000,000 voted by Congress for the drought relief. Here's the set-up below him:

The AAA and Department of Agriculture under Secretary Henry A. Wallace are buying millions of cattle and sheep to be removed from the commercial market and joining in a huge feed forage program of conservation and distribution necessitated by the fact that the most desperate problem is primarily one of animal food rather than human food.

Livestock left on farms won't have more than 50 per cent of normal feed requirements and compulsory rationing is a possibility.

The FEPA is enlarging grants to states for water and food relief, expanding its works program in drought states and launching a great campaign which will employ tens of thousands of distressed rural folks at rooting in the fields for stubble and weeds badly needed for forage.

Reserve Being Built
The Federal Surplus Relief Corporation kills and cans 50,000 head of cattle daily to build up a reserve for needy unemployed during the winter, when meat prices will shoot up and protect the rest of us from even higher prices which that reserve will prevent.

The Farm Credit Association, working with $100,000,000 from the congressional grant—which isn't enough, etc., while trying to see that the government pays enough for cattle to protect its existing loans.

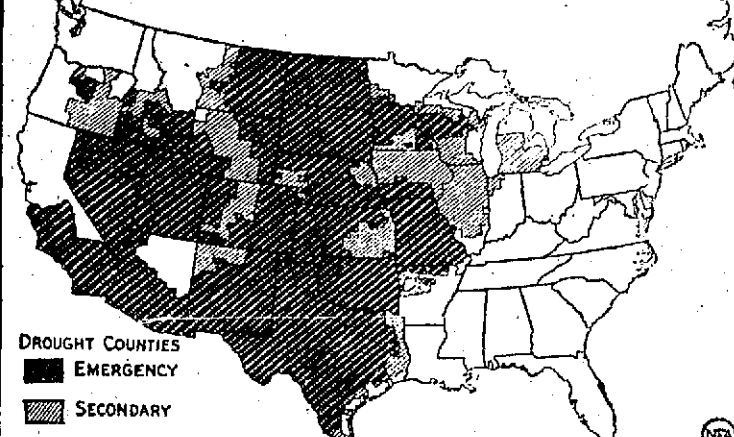

The CCC has turned its tools to drought work in a program which already has received $20,000,000.

The Commodity Credit Corporation is advancing $10,000,000 of RFC money to finance purchase and orderly marketing of hides, easing the present market glut, averting a subsequent certain

Arkansas Drouth Area Is Improved

Statistician Bouton Encouraged After Tour of 14 Counties

LITTLE ROCK.—Noticeable improvement, particularly in the spirits of the people was seen in Northeast Arkansas by Charles S. Bouton, agricultural statistician of the Bureau of Economics, on an inspection tour of 14 counties of that section, he reported on his return to Little Rock Wednesday.

Purchase of cattle in the 11 emergency drought counties was continued and purchases were expanded to include four new counties.

Harvey S. Cole, United States meteorologist, said in his weekly weather report that weather during the week ended Tuesday was favorable for cotton in some eastern and central sections but added that it was too hot and too much rain fell in the north-eastern areas.

In Little Rock a light rain brought lower temperature and a maximum temperature of 88 degrees, the lowest maximum since July 24. Only one-tenth of an inch of rain fell here.

Since the invention of printing in the fourteenth century, nearly 900,000,000 volumes of the Bible have been printed.

Cotton Ginned to August 16 Is 25% Behind Last Year

Total of 353,888 Bales Compares to 459,528 for Year Ago

OIL TOTAL IS CUT

September Allowable in Arkansas Reduced 1,100 Barrels

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—Cotton of this year's crop ginned prior to August 16 was reported Thursday by the Census Bureau to have totaled 353,888 running bales, counting 4,424 bales as half bales.

This romps with 459,528 running bales, including 9,807 half-bales, of the same date a year ago.

Oil Allowable Cut

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The national allowable crude oil production for September was set Thursday by Secretary Ickes at 2,341,700 barrels, a decrease of 107,600 barrels from August's quota of 2,449,300.

The Arkansas quota was reduced 29,300 daily—a cut of 1,100.

Municipal Plant Fought in Courts

Private Utility Contends Paragould Is Destroying It

WASHINGTON.—(AP)—The Arkansas Utilities Company has asked the U. S. Supreme court to review a ruling of the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals which held that the city of Paragould, Ark., could construct a municipal electric lighting plant.

Seeking to prevent construction of a plant, voted by Paragould's citizens in 1932, the utilities company brought suit in the federal court at Jonesboro, contending the municipal plant would destroy the value of its property.

The company insisted that the Arkansas General Assembly's act of 1924, returning to the municipalities the power to grant public utilities franchises was invalid because it provided specifically that others could construct and operate competing plants although public convenience and necessity did not require additional facilities.

He said the city had approved its rates and insisted it was rendering satisfactory service.

The company's claims were upheld by Judge John E. Martineau in United States District Court. He enjoined the city from constructing a gasom petting plant, holding that the company was able and willing to meet all demands of the city, and that its rates were reasonable and that construction of a municipal plant would practically destroy the value of the company's plant.

The Circuit Court of Appeals reversed Judge Martineau and ordered the suit dismissed, permitting the city to proceed with the construction of its own plant.

Your Health

By DR. MORRIS FISHER

Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Diet Not All-Important In Disease Treatment

Some people have the vague notion that there are special diets for every disease that afflicts mankind and that a good many diseases can be cured by diet alone. This impression arises, no doubt, simply because the satisfaction of hunger is one of the fundamental disorders of mankind.

Actually, there are a few major diseases in which the prescription of a specific diet is absolutely essential. In the majority of diseases, however, general diets are prescribed, such as soft diets, rough diets, high protein and low protein, high carbohydrate and low carbohydrate, or high fat and low fat diets.

It is also possible to increase the amounts of calcium or of iron or of other mineral salts by selection of certain food substances. Any good diet must, however, have suitable amounts of mineral salts and vitamins.

The main diseases in which doctors find it necessary to prescribe diets are diabetes, overweight and underweight, inflammation of the kidneys and, more recently, epilepsy.

There are, of course, some cases in which it is believed that the restriction of salt may be of value and there are some who place a great deal of emphasis on having diets that are very low in acid-forming substances.

The vast majority of people have to depend on their diets on certain fundamental foods. These are bread, milk, cereals, buttermilk, cheese, eggs, and meats.

In overweight, it is customary that the person have certain proteins necessary for the building of tissue, limited carbohydrates and fats, and all the necessary mineral salts and vitamins.

In most diets for overweight, it is customary to raise the protein requirement to about double the usual amount and then to cut down the carbohydrates and the fats, so that the total number of calories will be 1200 a day or less.

In diabetes it is customary to cut down the carbohydrates and to cut down also the total calories. Thus one may give 30 grams of carbohydrates, 30 grams of protein, and 90 grams of fat with a total of 1080 calories or, maintaining the same proportions, 50 grams of carbohydrates, 50 grams of protein, and 150 grams of fat, with a total of 1805 calories.

This is essentially a high fat diet, whereas other authorities believe in lowering the total amount of fat, giving one gram of carbohydrates to one gram of fat instead of one gram of carbohydrates and one gram of protein to three grams of fat.

When there is a large amount of albumen in the urine, it is customary to give a fairly high protein diet, whereas in cases of complicated heart and kidney conditions, it is customary to give a low protein diet and to restrict the amount of salt.

In epilepsy the so-called ketogenic diet is used with a large amount of fat.

It is obviously just as difficult for anyone who is not suitably informed to treat himself with diets according to modern knowledge and opinions as it would be for him to attempt to prescribe potent drugs.

How Napoleon Came Back for Last Fight—Here's Thrilling Account of Dramatic "100 Days"

By BRUCE CATTON

In "The Hundred Days," Philip Guedalla gives a graphic picture of one of the most thrillingly dramatic episodes in all human history—Napoleon's return from Elba and his rapid progress along the road that led to Waterloo.

After Waterloo was over, the Duke of Wellington remarked that it had been "a very near thing." Mr. Guedalla's little book shows how true that remark was. Beaten and discredited, his fate settled, apparently, forever, Napoleon came within a hair's breadth of upsetting the apple cart for keeps.

Mr. Guedalla does full justice to the drama of the story. Napoleon landed in France on an adventurer, playing a 100-to-1 shot. He started his famous march to Paris with a mere handful of followers. Troops were sent out to stop him—he met them, flung his cloak open, invited his old soldiers to shoot him—and presently had the troops following

YOUR CHILDREN

By Olive Roberts Barton

SCHOOL IS PAINLESS—ALMOST

But Graduates of the Old Method Wonder Whether Modern Youngsters Can Memorize Their Sums Well Enough Without Drills.

"We never," said Miss Smith, "teach anything without first arousing the interest of the child. I shudder when I think of how I used to sit hour after hour doing tables. Tables, tables, tables. Upside down, backwards, forwards and mixed. 'Sums' we used to call them."

Just so," nodded Mr. Cooper. "Sums they were. We all hated them, didn't we?"

"Hate them? Why I can't look a number in the face. But of course you have had to. It's your business, isn't it—office manager of a big store. But I suppose you don't actually have to do the number work yourself. I mean," hastily, "the book-keeping."

Hunting Mistakes

"Not now so much. But of course I had to for years. And before that when I was in the bank I worked with figures all day. Couldn't risk a mistake, either. A mistake of two cents kept us all three overtime till we found the error. I've stayed as high as five hours overtime to run down a nickel. A cent an hour. That's the way it's done."

"Mercy, it seems like slavery. All that for five cents. Ridiculous."

"Well, it's good discipline. The mistake could be in the thousand dollar column just as easily. And some one might say 'ten years for that kind of a mistake'."

"Anyway," we can't let the children smother their identities in tables and sums. Figures are so abstract. They don't express anything," explained Miss Smith.

The Store Method

"How do you go about it, ma'am?" asked old-fashioned Mr. Cooper.

"We make everything concrete. We keep store. Billy comes to the store six times and each time he buys an apple for five cents. Then he counts up the money in the box. Six—fives are thirty. He knows, too, that sixes are thirty, also. It teaches both multiplication and addition."

"I see. But will Billy have to close his eyes all his life and think of stores and apples and pennies when he's doing, say, a problem in cube root, or finding the greatest common divisor, or of the national debt?"

"You wouldn't understand, of course," smiled Miss Smith compassionately. "The old point of view cannot grow new eyes. Our work is far too psychological to grasp with the old lack of vision."

"Mebbe," said Mr. Cooper, pulling thoughtfully on his pipe. "But ten years from now I hope ledgers will have nice little birds on the margins, and a motto at the top. If at first you don't succeed—"

But Miss Smith was hunting the keys for her car. What was the use of talking to an old fogey like that?"

Captain Boycott, a land agent in Ireland, treated his tenants with such severity that they retaliated by refusing to work for him and allowing no one else to do so. This incident, in 1881, was the origin of the word "boycott."

his shouting their enthusiasm all across France.

A nation which had sighed with relief when he was exiled welcomed him back in a frenzy of joy. The Bourbon king stunk out, unnoticed, Napoleon became emperor again, raised an army, and marched off—to Waterloo, and final disaster.

Now all this, Mr. Guedalla points out, wasn't just personal magnetism. After all was said and done, Napoleon still represented the revolution, the ordinary Frenchman. He stood for the gain which human rights had made in that bloody overturn.

That was why Frenchmen followed him to bloody fields all across Europe. Tyrant that he was, he still seemed to be their defense against oppression.

BEACH CLUB GIRL

MABEL McELLIOTT

BEGIN HERE TODAY

BOOTS RABHORN, 19 and pretty, is openly snubbed by SYLVIA RIVERS, the richest girl in Larchbrook, fashionable New York suburb. Sylvia fails to ask Boots to a party at the Yacht Club. Boots receives a belated invitation from Mrs. WATERMAN, one of the elderly social lights.

HARDY WHITEHORE, one of Sylvia's guests, who had been drinking, puts Boots in an embarrassing situation and she is escorted home by RUSS LUND, swimming instructor. The next evening, Sylvia receives this opportunity to hurt Boots and persuades Mrs. FENNEL, of the Woman's Club to ask Boots to resign from the Juniors.

In her isolation from the crowd Boots begins to see a great deal of RUSS LUND. Suddenly he announces he is going away.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XIII

LATER, much later that night, Boots assured herself that she had imagined the whole thing. She wasn't in the least in love with Russ Lund. The very notion was preposterous. It was merely that she was lonely and at a loose end. Tomorrow she would greet him in quite simple and friendly fashion and everything would be as it had been before.

But it wasn't quite that way. She schooled herself not to sit near his raised platform on the sand. She managed not to look his way. When Johnny came along she chattered to him almost feverishly. If he enjoyed the mountains? Oh, she knew the Pineville Gap was a keen place. All the time she was conscious of a big, bronzed figure in a black bathing suit. She neither looked his way nor seemed to be conscious of his nearness but every fiber of her young being reached out invisible tentacles to him.

Presently as she lay stretched out languidly on the sand she heard his voice. "Guess you came when I was giving Mrs. Meredith a lesson."

She looked up swiftly and a sudden rush of telltale color belied the indifferent drawl in which she answered him. He flung himself on the beach beside her. Johnny had drifted away—he was at the diving stand—and they were suddenly quite alone together. It was low tide. The bathers were drifting homeward with their inevitable burdens of bags and books and hampers.

"Mother got home?" His voice was low. It had a note almost curiously intimate in it.

"Oh, not yet! Nine o'clock train. She strove to make her tone casual and the effort only succeeded in making it tremble a little. She became angry at herself for her tardiness and this realization of her own weakness made her voice sound cold and far away. They glanced up at her sharply.

"Not mad at me?"

She managed a laugh, wholly artificial and unconvincing. "What an idiot!"

They were quite alone in this little corner of the beach at the moment, with the exception of a young matron on the piazza who was rocking and counting stitches in her knitting. Boots, all her slim length a pleasant symphony in pale gold, broken only by the briefest and sleekest of bathing garments, linked her slim hands together and stared unseeing at the blue horizon.

"Bobby! Bobby!" Boots neither saw nor heard. She only knew that her blood was racing swiftly, that a pulse like a

"What an idiot!" she echoed nervously.

"Well, I didn't know." "You're going—when?" She hadn't meant to ask this question, had determined not to do so, but it tumbled out in spite of her resolutions. The man glanced at her quickly, glanced away.

"Oh, a week—10 days, maybe. Give them time to get somebody here."

"The season's almost over," Boots said quite at random, not heeding her words, nor in fact realizing in the least what she was saying. The dull pain of last night was starting all over again. He was going away—he was going away—she might never see him again!

"Yep!" Russ's big brown hand slipped over her small one, holding it like a prisoner's. She was aware of her pulse beating swiftly. "Miss me?" His deep voice asked.

"Why, of course!" Boots laughed softly, shading her eyes, pretending to peer at a sail far on the horizon. "Naturally."

"Like hell you will," Russ said moodily. "You'll go back to your kang. I," he pronounced steadily and solemnly, "will miss you like the very devil . . ."

The lee about her heart began to break up. Suddenly she came alive.

"Not really!" she said softly, almost caressingly. "Not honestly, Russ. You're just saying that . . ."

She was startled, almost frightened at the strength of the brown hand closing on her wrist. She drew her hand away.

"Don't be like that," he commanded shortly. "You know darn well how I feel about you . . ."

She was breathless. She had to go on, although she knew that way lay danger. "How?" she demanded under her breath.

SLIM, golden, her rounded breasts rising and falling under the deep curve of the dark jersey, she faced him. Her fingers were linked about her slender knees. In her snarl, curved throat a pulse beat deeply. The man stared back at her, his eyes darkened by some emotion.

"I'm crazy about you and that's a fact," he stated briefly.

"Oh, Russ!" Her eyes, under their dark, sweeping lashes, were stary; she fairly glowed.

"You don't give a darn!" He was tracing a pattern on the sand but his eyes never left her face.

"I do. Honestly, I'm—I'm awfully fond of you!" The words had slipped out against her will and now that they were out she would have given worlds to bite them back. They were so tame—so inadequate. Faint! Why, with her Adonis with the ready smile and the unruly shock of brown curling hair.

"No kidding?"

"No kidding!" She flung back her golden mane and gave him a smile so sweet, so bewitching, that the man caught his breath.

"Then why—why don't we do something about it?" he demanded in a husky undertone. A rompered baby with a pall staggered near, staggered away. The young matron on the veranda came to the rail and called him sharply.

"Bobby! Bobby!" Boots neither saw nor heard. She only knew that her blood was racing swiftly, that a pulse like a

Soap and Water Essential to Skin—Proper Rubbing While Washing Face and Thorough Rinsing Described

One of the smoothest, clearest skins I ever have seen belongs to a prominent writer who always cleans her face and neck with soap and water.

In the summer, she uses cleansing cream after the soap and water, wipes it off and puts on a skin tonic.

"I, for any reason, I did have to omit something, you can just bet that it wouldn't be soap and water," she told me.

And in that statement, of course, lies her secret. The woman realizes that thorough cleansing is the basis of real skin beauty. And, regardless of what she uses for cleansing, toning and nourishing, she knows the value of soap and water.

Besides removing all dirt and impurities from the skin, soap lather acts as a disinfectant, discouraging pimples and other minor eruptions. Be sure, however, to select your complexion soap as carefully as you buy cleansing cream, tooth paste or skin tonic. Get one that's made by a reputable firm. If, after four cleansings, it seems to irritate your skin or make it dry, don't keep on a day longer. Use the soap for something else or, better than to ruin your complexion, throw it away.

Remember that sensitive skin shouldn't be scrubbed with a rough wash cloth. Make a thick lather on your hands and then rub the soap on face and neck. In other words, wash your skin just as you always wash your hair, applying a heavy lather with upward and rotary strokes. Rinse several times.

Weekly Sunday School Lesson

Text: Hosea 11:1-4, 8-9; 14:3-5. The International Uniform Sunday School Lesson for August 26.

By WM. E. GILROY, D. D., Editor of Advance

Amos, we have seen, a young prophet with stern demands of righteousness. He met a society of sham prosperity, and sham culture, and a parade of sham religion, with the bitter invective of denunciation.

Hosea was no less righteous or insistent, but in his preaching to his age there was a note of tenderness and love. He saw the sinful as erring and wandering from the right way. He put himself in the place of the Almighty, choosing a people and loving them, and filled with pity and remorse when they rejected his choice and went astray.

In spite of all their sinfulness as a nation, there was still in God's attitude, as expressed by the prophet, the lure of love seeking to win them back to the right paths, withholding vengeance and judgment and offering healing and restoration. It is a beautiful lesson that is before us, moving in its tenderness and in its vision.

Have the Amos, or the Hoseas, accomplished the more in history? We need them both. We need the stern moralists who denounce evil and corruption, who tear off the things that cover shame, and who shake rotten things to their very foundation.

But we need, also, the tender and loving prophets who understand why men go astray, who see that even violence and corruption are perversions of right attitude and character, and who would stand at the crossways of life appealing to men to avoid the wrong way and to travel the right road.

There is need, also, of luring those who have taken the wrong turning back into the right way.

Hosea was a man of deep vision. His question in the closing verse of our lesson is still one that challenges the world.

"Who is wise," he asks, "and he shall understand these things; prudent and he shall see them?"

Lin, after all, is foolishness and destruction. Neither individuals nor nations can go the way of selfishness and greed without destroying what they would uphold.

The advantages of selfishness and dishonesty are illusive. When we allow shilliness and self-seeking to get hold upon life in business, in politics, or in other relationships, it does not require a deep or farseeing prophet to see what is going to happen in national and social life.

What does all for vision and faith and courage in the prophet is to discover the means of turning the hearts of men from the temptation of selfishness and greed to ways of right and truth.

Our task is not only to uphold goodness, but to make goodness effective. Righteousness will not save a nation unless it is practiced and organized. Technique is necessary, as well as

THE SALLOW GIRL

"The sallow girl is like a pearl, the fairest he has met;
The warthy one from whom men run, a ravishing brunette."

"She was fair and very fair,
Her beauty made me glad."

After taking Mendenhall's Malaria Chills and Fever Tonic with Arsenic.

The properties of arsenic are listed in the U. S. Dispensary as follows:

(1) Stimulation of nutrition—body building.

(2) Tonic and purifying action on the blood, thereby improving all bodily functions.

(3) Clearing and bleaching the skin, thus exalting bluntness and improving the complexion, and, through its alterative effect, of great value in the treatment of certain skin diseases.

(4) Beneficial in the treatment of bronchitis, particularly the chronic type frequently found in the aged, and in many cases of asthma.

(5) In chronic wasting diseases, such as tuberculosis, or in certain types of nervous debility with malnutrition, arsenic is one of the very few substances which really deserve the name of "general tonic," since it increases both the weight and strength of the patient.

(6) In regard to malaria, the Dispensary states: "Arsenic is the most successful agent in the treatment of chronic malaria, intermittent or malarial fevers, chronic chills, brow ache, neuralgia, headache, or rheumatism due to malaria or general bad health."

The Day Is Done

The day is done, and the darkness
Falls from the wings of Night,
As a feather is wafted downward
From an eagle in his flight.
Come read to me some poem,
Some simple, heartfelt lay,
That shall soothe this restless feeling,
And banish the thoughts of day.
Such songs have power to quiet
The restless pulse of care,
And come like the benediction
That follows after prayer.
Then read from treasured volume
The poem of thy choice,
And lend to the rhyme of the poet,
The beauty of thy voice,
And lend to the rhyme of the poet,
The beauty of thy face.
And the eyes that never sleep,
Shall fold their lids like the day,
And as silently steal away. H.W.L.

U. S. IS SPENDING

shortage, and turning over to FSRC for processing into relief shoes.

To get a more detailed picture of the activities directed from Washington, come down to the big buildings housing the Department of Agriculture and the AAA where the executive staff and at least a dozen bureaus and committees are working hard on the drouth.

Seed Bought in Huge Lots

The AAA Commodity Purchase section directs the cattle buying at the rate of 70,000 a day for Federal Surplus Relief Corporation culling and shipping to pasture and has purchased 20,000,000 bushels of wheat, durum, oats and barley for seed, with more to come, including some from Canada.

The department's extension service, with its county agents everywhere, and alliances with agricultural colleges play a general role in all operations, exchanging information between the capta and the farmers, and reporting on need and availability of pasture in dozens of states.

The Bureau of Animal Industry's agents decide which animals are fit to ship, cull herds and save bulls which will preserve the best strains.

They have visited more than 200,000 farms, checked more than 10,000,000 head of cattle and okayed more than 4,000,000 for purchase, certified 54,000 carloads—about two-thirds of the purchased animals—for shipping, and condemning or moving the rest. The bureau also inspects the FSRC's canned meat.

Make Feed Survey

The National Livestock Feed Committee appointed by Wallace is making a national survey of the location of available feed and forage supplies, including corn stalks and wheat straw. Hay and other feed will be bought, some to be given to FSRC for penniless farmers and some to be held for sale, while commercial agencies are encouraged to conserve supplies for later emergency.

The Bureau of Plant Industry isolates grain seed in areas where it might otherwise all be sold on the market and holds it for next year, to see that seed best adapted for given areas will then be available for those areas. It has $25,000,000 for that.

The Forest Service is planning its great $100,000,000 shelter belt of trees, to run 1000 miles through the plains states for future protection. A field office has been opened in Lincoln, Neb., and work will begin as soon as organization is complete, to afford further emergency relief through employment.

Soil Conditions Checked

The Bureau of Chemistry and Soils is helping the Forest Service, as well as checking soil condition through the drouth area.

The Weather Bureau, still another Department of Agriculture agency, prepares special daily reports for Wallace on rainfall and temperatures over the country.

The Bureau of Agricultural Economics provides vitally important information on the status of all crops: drouth conditions, farm prices, food and feed supplies, the foreign drouth situation, and so on. Daily information pours in by telephone and telegraph.

The Bureau of Agriculture Engineering tackles the serious drouth conditions in irrigated areas.

The Bureau of Home Economics figures out the most economical ways of shifting from high-priced foods to other foods, with the relative energy and protein contents.

Consumers Safeguarded
And the Consumers' Council of AAA, through the widely circulated Consumers' Guide and public statements, post consumers on price changes, enables them to distinguish between fair and unfair increases, checks their complaints and reports the miso other agencies for action and tells housewives what they can do locally to protect themselves against gouging.

There are other drouth agencies under Wallace—such as the Emergency Drouth Relief Service, which tells farmers how to make poor fodder more palatable for cattle and thinks like that. Nobody can keep track of them all.

Though the emergency drouth set-up has been remarkably effective, more co-ordination was needed, so a general committee in charge of drouth relief has just been named.

Meanwhile, the AAA, while devoting most of its attention to the drouth, is planning for the future what it hopes will be a balanced, planned American agriculture.

Benefit Payments Huge

Benefit payments this year will be about $500,000,000, mostly in drouth states, and it confidently predicts a big increase in national farm income for 1934 despite the drouth, the impoverishment of nobody knows how many farmers, and the uncertainty about next year.

Private industry has supplemented the huge federal drouth program. Instances include the reduction of railroad rates on hay, feed, and cattle movements, loan by oil men of a huge pipe-line to carry 500,000 or more gallons a week a day into parts of the drouth area, donation by California peach growers to FSRC of peaches which were to have been left to rot on trees, and an offer by the National Food and Grocery Distributors' Code Authority to help stop profiteering.

TIDE WASHES

more than a month ago by a Wilmington woman who guarded her secret of the sands while she reaped a daily harvest, Monday a Charlotte youngster, Billy Kidd, stumbled on good luck and the secret was out.

The total found within half an hour of high tide amounted to between $5 and $10 each day. Mrs. Mary Manning the Wilmington woman first to find "pay sand" was reticent when questioned but she was quoted by others as saying she had averaged better than $4 daily for four or five weeks.

The coins found include pennies, nickels, dimes, quarters and a few half dollars.

Several explanations have been offered. One theory is that all money lost by bathers on the beach has accumulated in one slough and is being brought in by an unusual current.

Another is that it is a part of the swag obtained in a robbery of the old Oceanic hotel in 1928.

PREACHER JAILED

a story of being abducted. Sheriff Paul Garrison said Askew had confessed that his story of abduction was false and that he had written the notes to his 50-year-old wife and to Mrs. Almore Sample McPherson demanding $25,000 from each.

Agents of the Department of Justice participated in the questioning with county officers. They said the evidence would be turned over to the United States district attorney.

Askew disappeared after leaving Goldsboro August 13 and reappeared four days later in Nashville, where he told police he had been "carried all over the country" by three men in an automobile. Then he came home and went to bed on order of his physician who permitted the questioning Wednesday.

Officers said Askew admitted he faked the entire proceedings because "I needed a rest and had to get away." Sheriff Garrison said the minister admitted having mailed to his wife the night of August 13 a typewritten note demanding $25,000 in exchange for Askew's life. The sheriff said the evangelist also admitted demanding a like sum from the Los Angeles evangelist to prevent Angelus Temple from being bombed.

The officers quoted Askew as saying he went to Raleigh on leaving here, then took a train to Richmond from where the note to Mrs. McPherson was mailed. From Richmond, Askew said he went to Washington where he telegraphed his wife to "have the money ready by Saturday." The telegram, sent Thursday, was signed "Cortez."

After this, Askew was quoted as saying, he went by bus to Knoxville and thence to Nashville.

PROFIT SYSTEM

showing such initiative in getting back on its own feet that it is more and more relieving the federal government of "responsibilities which under normal conditions belong to business."

Toper said the Roosevelt regime is "squarely behind" the principle of continuing the "profit motive" and believed in "just profits for management and capital and an equitable return to labor for its rightful rewards in the economic processes."

"No thinking business man desires to have the old order restored," he said. "He does desire and is entitled to have the new order characterized by a better control against economic catclysms and by the freedom to exercise his initiative in planning for the future of his business in the light of an equitable profit system."

James Cagney at Saenger 2 Days

"Here Comes the Navy" at Theater Thursday and Friday

Warner Bros. melodramatic thriller of Uncle Sam's Jack-tars Here Comes the Navy! plays Thursday and Friday at the Saenger with James Cagney and Pat O'Brien co-starring and 3,000 sailors taking an active part.

The picture is said to carry some of the most breath-taking thrills ever witnessed, in addition to supplying plenty of hilarious comedy and a glowing romance. The action takes place aboard the U.S.S. Arizona at the dirigible field at Sunnydale, Cal., with the U.S.S. Macon at the Naval training station at San Diego, Cal., and at the Navy yards at Bremerton, Wash.

One of the stirring scenes which comes in as part of the background of the picture is the weighing of anchor of the entire Pacific fleet to start the cruise for Atlantic waters under Presidential command. This is the first time such a scene of the entire fleet in action has ever been shown in a picture.

There is thrill after thrill in the picture.

Canadian Quintuplets Bring Fame to Country Doctor

A "DOLL" THAT OPENS ITS EYES

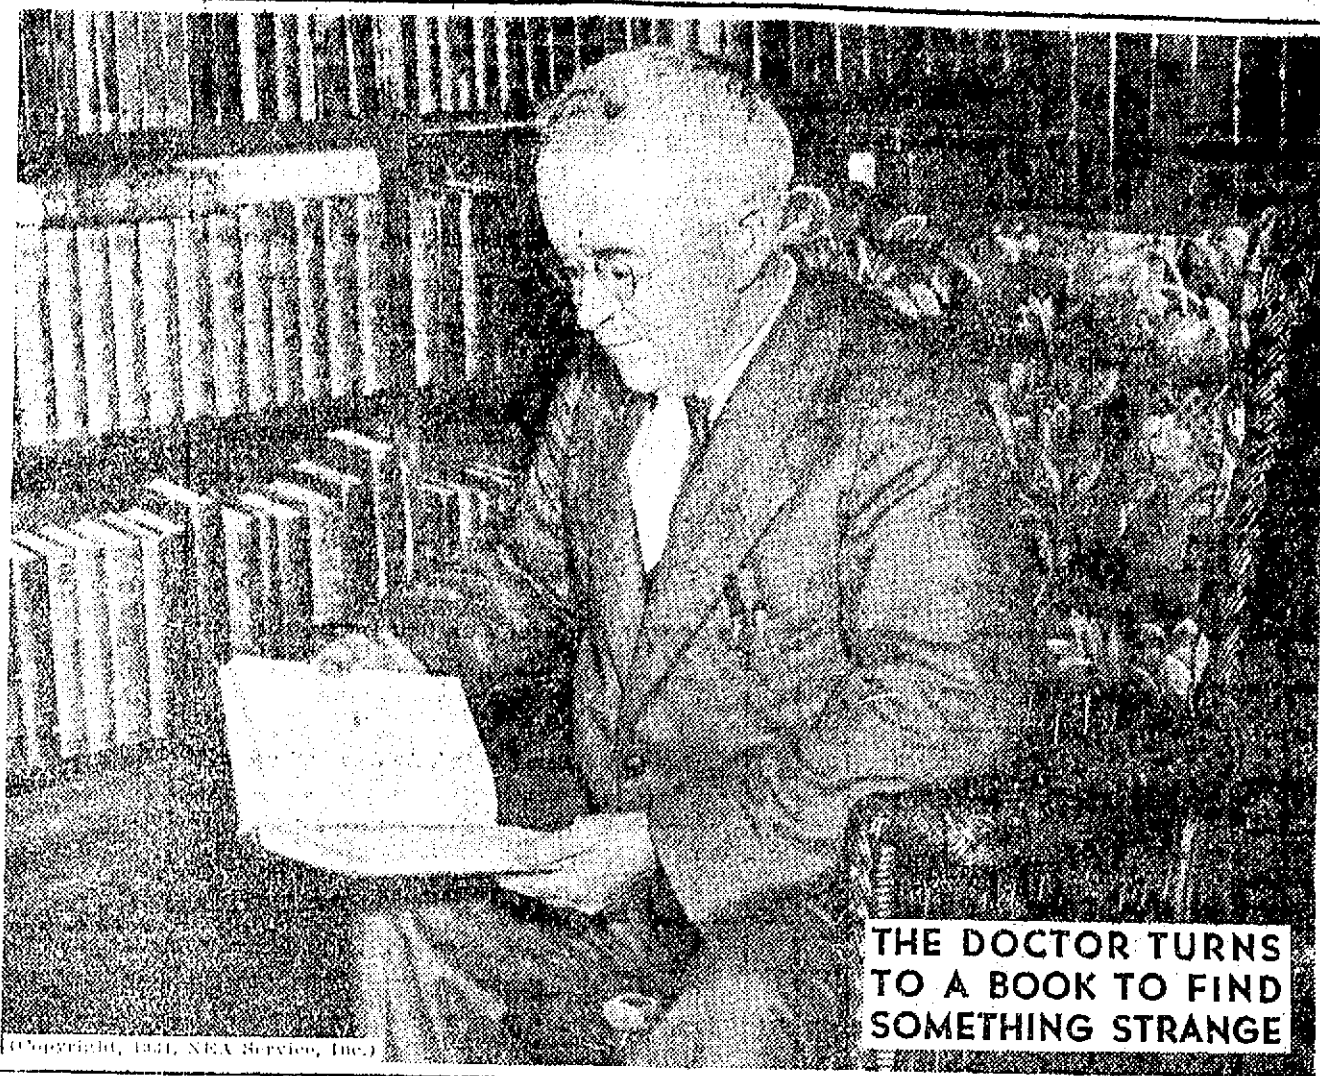

Though she isn't saying anything, you can see that Cecile Dionne is taking in all the proceedings despite her doll-like appearance. Dr. Dafoe's gentle and skillful handling has been a great factor in the quintuplets' remarkable condition.

Kept at an even temperature, the precious supplies of mothers' milk are now guarded at the Dionne home in a modern refrigerator. Here's Nurse De Kiriline removing the bottles for a feeding. And she does it every three hours.

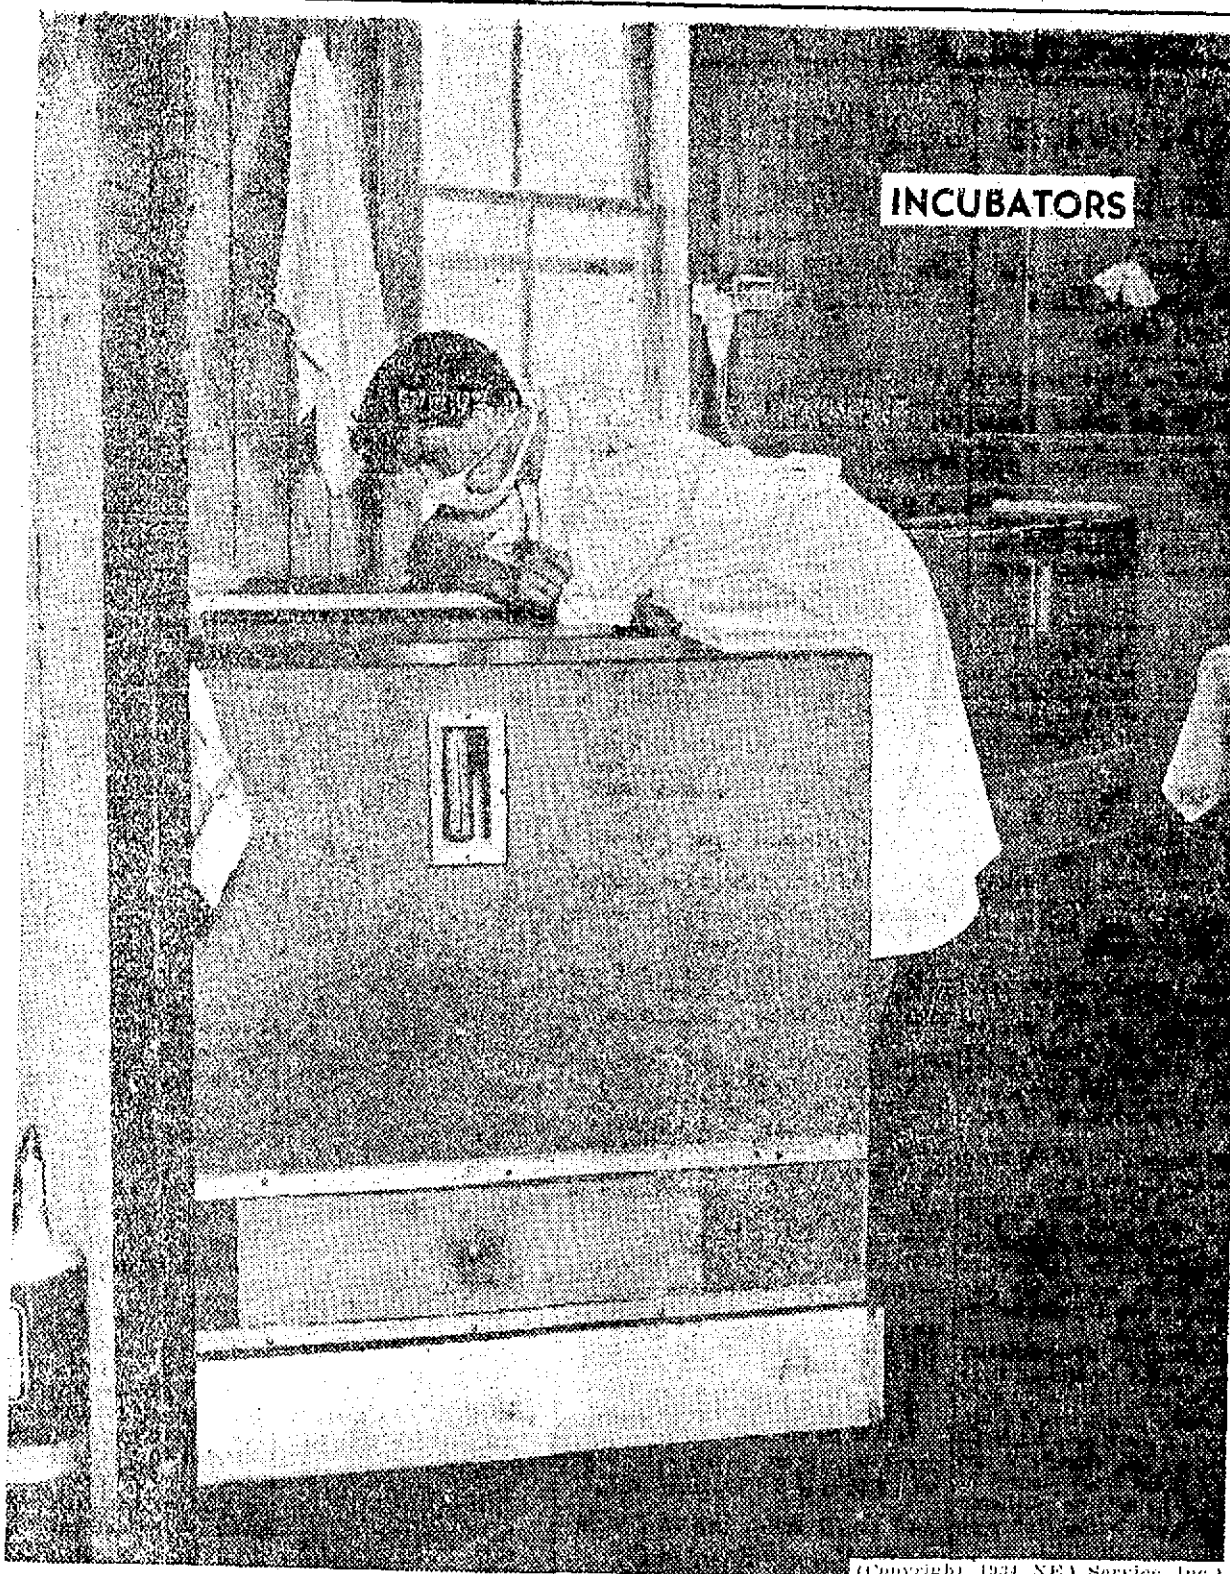

THE DOCTOR TURNS TO A BOOK TO FIND SOMETHING STRANGE

Even as busy a man as Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe must relax now and then, and here he is in the study of his Callander home with the shelves of classics and detective and mystery stories that are almost his only diversion.

INCUBATORS

Home, sweet home for a quintuplet. One of the five individual incubators in which the babes are being reared. A second may be seen in the corner of the room, behind Nurse De Kiriline. Note the thermometer, which enables the temperature readings inside the incubators to be made without opening the lid. Note also the plain board floor and walls of the room.

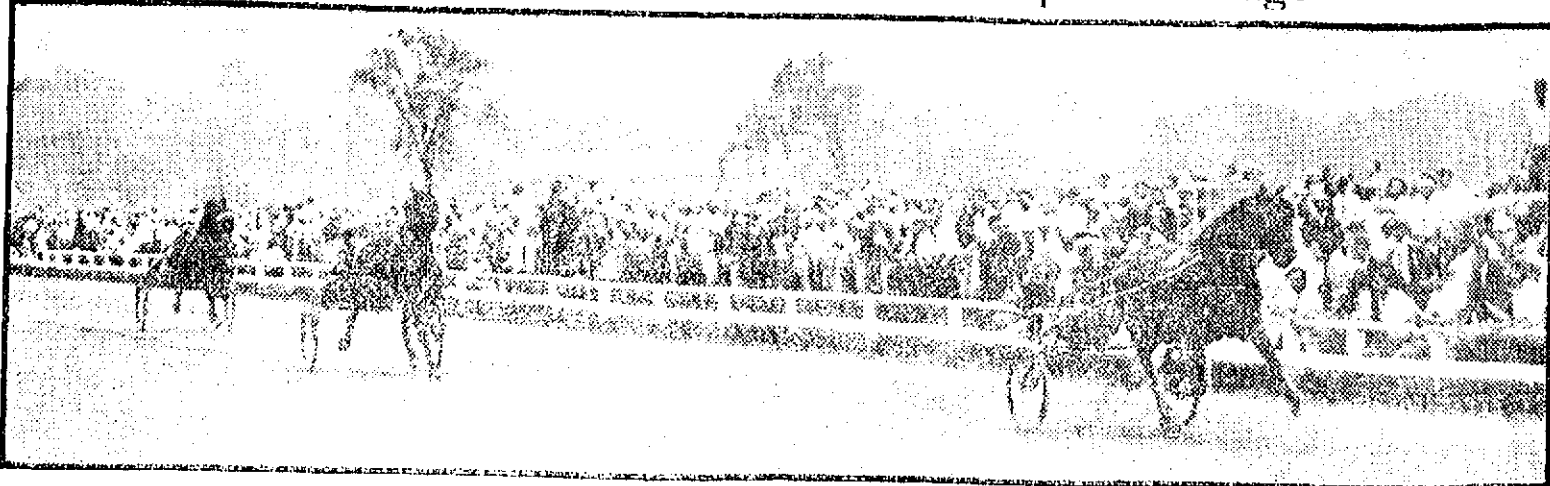

HOME, BUT DR. DAFOE'S NOT THERE MUCH

(Copyright, 1934, NEA Service, Inc.)

Here is the modest brick home of Dr. A. R. Dafoe in Callander, with the doctor before the wire gate, about to set forth on a call. Dr. Dafoe's wife died several years ago, and a housekeeper maintains his combined residence and office, which are known and frequented by almost every resident of the vicinity.

Lord Jim Proves He Belongs in the Equine Peerage

Scoring an upset over three favorites, Lord Jim raced into the peerage of harness racers when he won the ninth renewal of the famous Hambletonian Stakes, worth $14,000 to his owner, at Goshen, N. Y. Considered an ungainly colt, the extent of his superiority is vividly demonstrated in the finish of the fourth and final heat, which is pictured above. Muscletone and Princess Peg trailed him past the judges.

The Bambino Was Just a Trifle Slow

Babe Ruth tried to score from second base on Selkirk's single in the third game of the series with the Detroit Tigers in New York—and look what happened! The Bambino was out at the plate. Another veteran who was considered "through" slipped him, Goose Goslin making a quick throw from the outfield to Catcher Mickey Cochrane.
